Repetition will be used as a technique in support of each of these goals. Learning is volatile and requires a layering process. After one layer is allowed to set but before it evaporates, another layer must be applied. And so it builds, layer upon layer, until the principles for a lifetime are established.

Although Dr. Williams is an engineering genius, he has trouble laying out a clear and concise solution. I just took my first undergraduate dynamics class, and found it easier to teach myself the material rather than try and sift through all the confusing prose that Dr. Williams considers educational text.
