Unlike the designated hitter in baseball, the DP in Softball can bat for any position player, not just the pitcher. If the DP is used, the FLEX player has to be used. The FLEX player plays defense but does not bat because the DP bats for her, and therefore the FLEX is listed as the tenth player in the lineup, as shown at right.

Making Out Your Lineup No.1: This position is called your "lead-off hitter" and is the person who gets on base the most. This does not mean they always get a hit to get on base, they might walk a lot (if walks are allowed in your league). This batter should be fast so they can get as far around the bases as possible on bunts and base hits.

In many youth baseball organizations, your team must bat through the lineup. That is to say, if you have 12 kids on a team, all 12 must bat before you start at the top of the order. In these cases, we suggest you follow the above guidelines for positions 1 to 7 then rotate players 8 to 12, keeping them even on at-bats when the season closes.
